- 5 TITLE: To Consider the Commission’s Position Regarding the Proposed Severe Restrictions to the Upcoming 2006 Salmon Season
- REPORT: Wilkerson
- PROPOSED ACTION: To be determined

Action: The following members of the fishing community were in attendance and signed Public Comment forms to be able to address this Item:

Peggy Beckett, Huck Finn Sportfishing
Bob Franko, Founder/Chairman of the Coastside Fishing Club
Duncan MacLean, Half Moon Bay Fisherman’s Association
William Smith of Riptide Sportfishing
Darrell Ticehurst, Pacific Fisheries Management Council (PFMC)

Mr. Franko presented a handout to the Board concerning Klamath River salmon and the implications for the 2006 ocean salmon season. He reported 20,000 brochures were being printed from the handout that would be ready for distribution on March 16. The fishing community is going to rent buses and converge upon Sacramento during the April PFMC meetings. He made the point that salmon are not an endangered species and that there is a very large salmon population in the ocean.

Campbell mentioned the petition previously circulated by Peggy Becket and asked whether signers had to be registered voters. Mr. Franko said they did not.

Darrell Ticehurst of the Pacific Fisheries Management Council (PFMC) addressed the Board. He said he had just returned from their March 5-10 meeting in Seattle. The Department of Fish and Game (DFG) has proposed no 2006 salmon season in Oregon and California, based upon efforts to “protect the fish.” He advised the fish have become sick from a parasite that flourishes in the low water levels caused by the diversion of water from the Klamath River for the crops of Klamath Basin farmers.

Ticehurst said there is not much scientific justification for the radical action of the DFG. This is the third year the Klamath River is not meeting the required 35,000 “floor” but that these have been very big years for salmon fishing. He said the DFG’s actions are based upon an obscure clause stating that there will be no salmon season if the target is not met for three years.

Ticehurst said the PFMC is considering three options: A season like 2005, not much of a season, or no season. He said water politics are at the root of the Klamath problems and that it makes no sense to try to solve a river problem by stopping ocean fishing. The objective is to get the state politicians to listen but then the PFMC must also be addressed.

Lundie commended General Manager Grenell for an excellent letter of support (03/03/06) and asked what else the Board could do. Ticehurst said to support emergency action and communicate with politicians, stressing the economic impact the restrictions would have, and what difficulties the harbors would face.

Peggy Beckett of Huck Finn Sportfishing advised she had been faxing information regarding the salmon season issues to vendors of fishing related products. She said the charter boat operators had gotten together to discuss the restrictions and options. She thanked the Board for putting the matter on the Agenda.

William Smith of Riptide Sportfishing stated that this is a dire situation for small charter businesses. If the salmon restrictions are put into effect, the shift would be to rock cod fishing. He said, there could be an in-season emergency closure in September so that he would be unable to fish for either salmon or rock cod. He requested the Board consider a reduction in berth rents and harbor ticket fees.

The question was posed whether the charter boat operators qualify as commercial fishermen since they carry passengers to fish from their vessels.

Duncan MacLean of the Half Moon Bay Fisherman’s Association said it boils down to public perception. He requested that the Board work with the public to change the perception that salmon are being over-fished and to present the truth that the Klamath is a “sick river.” He said to stress the socioeconomic impact of how a restricted season or no season would devastate the coast. He presented a handout regarding the barriers set up to mitigate the parasite in Klamath River that had the unintended consequence of habitat loss. He said the Coastside Fishing Club is doing a stellar job of fighting the restrictions.

MacLean advocated a new model wherein there were no radical changes; however, twenty-year old data is replaced with more accurate data of the past three years. Impacts on the Klamath stock would be averaged in. He said it is necessary to continue to build an administrative record. One positive aspect is that the Secretary of the Department of the Interior and the Secretary of Commerce would meet on March 28.

MacLean suggested propagating a “hatch box” program wherein hatched eggs would be released along the river. The ultimate result would be natural spawners that do not go back to the hatcheries. He said he had the Board’s letters (03/03/06) entered into the PFMC March meeting records.

Lundie asked what the Board should do since they did not want to repeat the previous letter. Franko advised the Board that the federal government would not want to be seen as the administration that shut down a billion dollar industry. He said to address the issue in terms of loss of revenue and how it relates to Board members as residents of a coastal community.

The Board agreed they would generate a second round of letters concentrating on the economic aspect of the proposed restrictions.

Parravano thanked all of the speakers. He thanked Ticehurst for what he is doing for the fishing community.

6	TITLE:	Informational Update: Midcoast Local Coastal Program “Update” – Median Strip Rezoning
	REPORT:	Wilkerson
	PROPOSED ACTION:	To be determined

Action: Campbell gave the update on the Median Strip. She advised that she, General Manger Grenell, Harbor Master Temko, and District Counsel Zafferano had attended the Board of Supervisors meeting the previous day. Wilkerson had also attended the meeting as support.

Campbell advised that the proposal was to put one residential unit in the median strip area, with 90 percent remaining open space. She advised that Grenell outlined another approach, splitting the lot, still leaving 90 percent open space, so as not to decrease the value of the property.

She said that Zafferano testified before the Supervisors that the District had used the property, valued at greater than $1 million, to collateralize the District’s loans to Department of Boating and Waterways (DBAW). She reported that Temko said the property was an asset that could unfortunately become a liability wherein the District would spend more on it than it is making. He also spoke of the non-revenue producing work the District does such as monitoring the safety concerns of the Harbor and providing public access.

Commissioner Tucker questioned an invoice from the Television Equipment Association. Harbor Master Johnson explained that this was for waterproof radio equipment for the Personal Water Crafts (PWC's). This enables the patrol staff to communicate with each other and the Coast Guard. Harbor Master Temko added the equipment was mounted inside the helmet and had ear and mouthpieces and had been developed by the military so that it was sturdy enough to be used repeatedly for several years when staff was on the PWC's out in the surf.
